

LAUNCHPAD STUDIO

THE 3 REASONS YOU'RE NOT GETTING HIRED.

AND HOW TO FIX IT.

BLNG STUDIO

WELCOME.

I'm so glad you're reading this guide — it means you care enough to figure out what's actually going wrong, rather than just sending more applications and hoping for the best.

There are a lot of people out there giving vague advice. "Build your network." "Make your portfolio stand out." It sounds right. It doesn't actually help.

That's why I put together this guide. It names the three things that are actually standing between you and the career you want — and gives you practical, honest steps to fix each one.

LET'S GET INTO IT.

WHY LISTEN TO ME?

I have spent years working at award-winning and world-renowned architectural offices — across New York, London and Mexico City. Now I run my own practice, and I have been through hundreds of applications and interviews on both sides of the table. I know exactly what works and what doesn't.

I also teach at some of the world's best institutions — the Architectural Association, Pratt Institute, and CEDIM — because I believe what schools don't teach is just as important as what they do.

TEACHING WHAT NOBODY TAUGHT YOU.

REASON ONE

CLARITY OF WHO YOU ARE.

LAUNCHPAD STUDIO

MOST GRADUATES APPLY FOR EVERYTHING. THAT IS EXACTLY THE PROBLEM.

WHY IT MATTERS

When you don't know what you want — what kind of practice, what role you're genuinely suited for — your applications say nothing. They're polite, generic, forgettable. The person reading them can't tell why you're writing to them specifically.

WHAT IT LOOKS LIKE

Studios receive hundreds of applications. The ones that stand out are the ones where someone clearly knows what they want and why this particular place matters to them. Clarity cuts through noise.

HOW TO FIX IT

Before you send another application, answer three questions: What kind of work do I actually want? What are my genuine strengths? Which practices do I admire and why? When your answers are clear, your applications become specific — and specific applications get responses.

LAUNCHPAD STUDIO HELPS YOU GAIN THAT CLARITY.

REASON TWO

FOCUS TO GET IN THE ROOM.

LAUNCHPAD STUDIO

A PORTFOLIO NEEDS YOUR POINT OF VIEW.

WHY IT MATTERS

Most graduates present their work as a collection — everything they've done, in the order they did it. But the people hiring don't have time to figure out what you're trying to say. Your portfolio needs to make a case — showing not just what you made, but how you think.

WHAT IT LOOKS LIKE

The same is true of your CV and cover letter. Every touchpoint is a chance to communicate your focus. When those pieces are aligned and sharp, you don't need to apply to fifty places. You need to apply to the right ten.

HOW TO FIX IT

Edit ruthlessly. Choose three to five projects that best represent how you think. For each one, say in one sentence: what was the problem, and what did you bring to it. Lead with your strongest work. Make the person reading it feel they understand you immediately.

LAUNCHPAD STUDIO HELPS YOU TUNE IN YOUR VOICE.

REASON THREE

DRIVE TO KEEP MOVING.

LAUNCHPAD STUDIO

GETTING HIRED IS AN ACTIVE SPORT.

WHY IT MATTERS

Posting your portfolio and waiting is not a strategy. The graduates who get the roles they want are the ones who put themselves in the room — through targeted outreach, through knowing how to talk about their work, through building relationships before a job is even advertised.

WHAT IT LOOKS LIKE

The market is competitive. But most of your competition is doing exactly what you're doing — waiting. The gap between you and the graduate who got the job you wanted is often not talent. It is initiative.

HOW TO FIX IT

Identify three practices you genuinely want to work at. Write a specific, personal email to each — not a form letter, but something that shows you know their work. Follow up. Practise talking about your work out loud. Stay sharp, stay visible, keep moving.

LAUNCHPAD STUDIO GETS YOU INTO THE RIGHT ROOMS.

Most are following

AN OLD PLAYBOOK.
AND IT'S NOT GETTING RESULTS.

THIS IS FOR YOU.
